

Имя, фамилия: _____

Keep your answers VERY short and simple, relying heavily on the vocabulary and constructions given in the book. DO NOT tell about Google Translate's life. Google Translate doesn't have a life. It's a mindless, soul-sucking, brain-eating automaton!

☞ Pencil in your typical daily schedule this semester — use imperfective verbs. Write in the times for each event — refer to Day 67 to recall how to state these times in Russian. Remember, you can also tell about where you go every day using motion verbs!

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

☞ Now, tell about what you did yesterday specifically, at which times. Since this will involve a one-time sequence of actions, use a series of perfective verbs in the past tense.

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

☞ What about tomorrow's schedule? Tell what you'll do tomorrow specifically using a sequence of perfective verbs in the future.

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

В _____ я _____.

☞ Answer — when necessary, by giving full time expressions (write them out, don't simply write numerals!). See Day 67 if needed.

1. Ты хорошо выспался / выспалась вчера? _____2. Сколько часов ты спал(а)? _____3. Во сколько ты лёг / легла спать вчера? _____4. А во сколько ты проснулся / проснулась сегодня? _____5. А во сколько встал / встала? _____6. Во сколько ты ляжешь спать сегодня, наверное? _____

☞ Translate a few examples. The Russian verb literally means "to appear to someone in a dream" — don't be misled by the English!

1. I dreamed of a new car. _____

2. He always dreams of a large window. _____

3. He dreamed that he was running in the park. _____

4. What a nightmare! _____
